Differential Tube Media

This group of Dehydrated Culture Media, Difco, is recommended for the cultural differentiation of isolated strains of the intestinal bacteria. The aerobic and anaerobic reactions produced in tubes of these media are exceptionally brilliant and reliably characteristic.

Bacto-Russell Double Sugar Agar

Bacto-Russell Double Sugar Agar is an exceptionally valuable medium for the cultural differentiation of organisms of the intestinal group. The formula used for this product corresponds exactly to the original except that phenol red is used for the indicator. Cultural reactions obtained by aerobic and anaerobic growth of the inoculated strains are brilliant and clear cut.

Bacto-Krumwiede Triple Sugar Agar

Bacto-Krumwiede Triple Sugar is an excellent medium for use in conjunction with Russell's for the differentiation of the intermediate members of the colon-typhoid group. When made up for use in the laboratory the medium conforms to the original formula except that the more satisfactory indicator phenol red is used. Like Russell's, this medium is used in tubes and is inoculated by surface smear and sub-surface stab.

Bacto-Lead Acetate Agar

Bacto-Lead Acetate Agar is a particularly useful medium for the detection of hydrogen sulfide production by bacteria, and is recommended for the cultural differentiation of the paratyphoid organisms. The medium, when prepared for use, is nontoxic and may be used for plating as well as for tube inoculations.

Bacto-Peptone Iron Agar

Bacto-Peptone Iron Agar is a modification of the medium developed by Levine and his associates for the rapid detection of hydrogen sulfide production by bacteria. The cultural reaction produced by anaerobic growth of organisms in this medium is exceptionally brilliant and distinct.

Bacto-Kligler Lead Acetate Agar

Bacto-Kligler Lead Acetate Agar is prepared according to a modification of the formula originally devised by Kligler. In this medium the reactions obtained with Russell's medium and with lead acetate agar are combined in one tube. The reactions are exceptionally brilliant and are readily interpreted.
